Learn Your Signs

Rising Sign

(Ascendant/Lagna Rashi)

The ascendant, also known as the rising sign, refers to the astrological sign positioned on the eastern horizon at the moment of an individual's birth. It indicates both the physical appearance and the emerging consciousness of the person. As the ascendant is determined by a specific time and place, astrologers interpret it as representing the unique environment and upbringing that shape an individual, along with the circumstances of their early years. Consequently, astrologers believe that the ascendant influences how a person has learned to portray themselves to others, particularly in public and formal settings.

Sun Sign

(Surya Rashi)

Your Sun sign represents the astrological influence of the Sun at the time of your birth, making it the most significant sign in shaping your personality. It serves as a descriptor of your dominant traits, defining your essence and how you interact with the world around you. Common stereotypes associated with different signs—such as Capricorns being practical yet critical, or Pisces being empathetic but sometimes overly sensitive—often stem from Sun sign characteristics. These qualities influence your self-perception, values, strengths, weaknesses, and even offer insights into your personal growth journey.

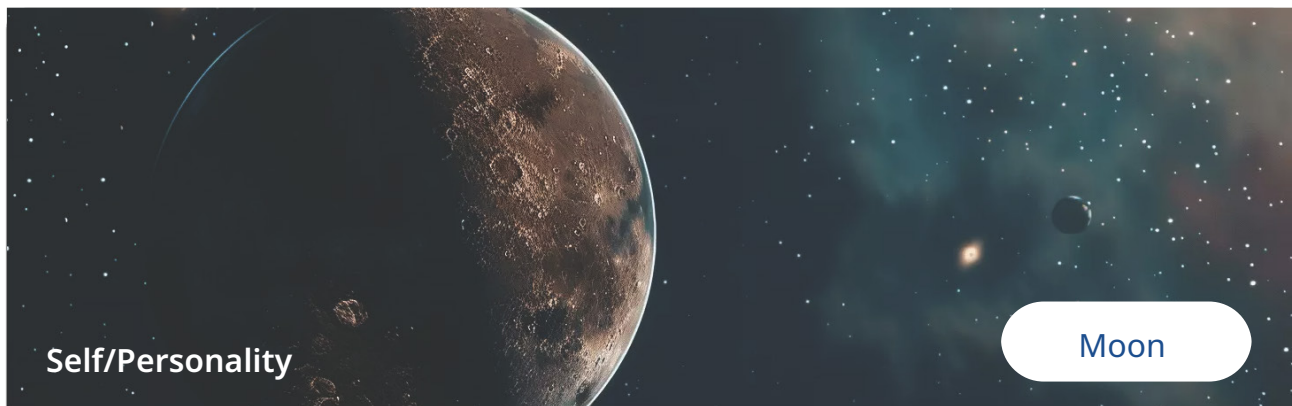

Moon Sign

(Chandra Rashi)

Your Moon sign, determined by the Moon's placement in the zodiac at the time of your birth, serves as a key descriptor of your emotional landscape, including feelings, desires, and subconscious tendencies. It unveils aspects of your inner world that may not be immediately apparent, shedding light on what lies beneath the surface. Similar to how the Moon guides the night and influences the tides, your Moon sign governs the more fluid and emotional aspects of your life. It holds sway over your deepest emotions and contributes to your sense of emotional security. For a deeper understanding of your emotional expression.
